With 20 years experience as a strategy consultant, including positions with three of the world's premier consulting firms and building his own successful consulting business, Ryk has spent most of his professional career advising companies around the globe. He combines many years of strategy and business experience together, with his unique insights into human behaviour gained as a clinical neuropsychologist, to continue supporting corporate leaders with services in leadership development and executive facilitation.

Facilitation Credentials

Ryk's extensive experience as a facilitator spans three continents. His skills are based on a solid foundation of formal education and teaching qualifications and experience, as Ryk applied his Diploma of Education for several years as a secondary school teacher and tertiary lecturer before working as a clinical psychologist.

After completing his MBA he worked as a management consultant in several countries, including four years based in New York. During this time he has presented to a vast array of audiences and facilitated a multitude of business sessions - from Boards to staff employees, Fortune 500 companies to small businesses, government departments and not-for-profits - Ryk has worked with all manner of organisation and every type of stakeholder.
